The A-T Children's Project raises funds to support and coordinate biomedical research, scientific conferences, and a clinical center – all aimed at finding a cure or life-improving therapies for A-T. Ataxia-telangiectasia (A-T) is a fatal genetic, neurodegenerative disease that attacks children, giving them the combined symptoms of cystic fibrosis, cerebral palsy, immune deficiencies, muscular dystrophy, and cancer. Most children with A-T are unable to walk by the age of ten and often do not survive their early twenties.
